A Dentist to Royalty. "Dr. Evans," said my friend, "makes, perhaps, $60,000 a year from his practice. He is in demand at all the courts of Europe, and Queen Victoria is very fond of him. I was visiting with him once when he had a letter from the king of Greece, who wanted him to come and fix his teeth for him. He told me that he could not go, as the expense of traveling so far would eat up the profits. He said in going from court to court as a sort of itinerant king's dentist, he only made tours when he could lay them out so as to bring a number of courts in one trip. This to the immense fee which Dr. Evans exchange business. charged, he was given presents of diamonds and other things of great value, Among his presents were diamond studded snuff boxes, fine rings, diamond pins, and furs which were almost worth their weight in gold. His house in Paris is filled with beautiful souvenirs, and he has presents from all the kings from the ezar of Russia down to the prince of some petty dukedom."

I don't suppose any American has ever stood so close to a European throne as Dr. Evans did to that of Louis Napoleon. He came daily at 8 o'clock to the emperor and chatted with him while he was dressing. Be then went to the dressing-room of Eugenie and talked English with the empres. Evans was a good gossip and retailed the talk of the court to Napoleon's wife. He was as good a friend of hers as she was of his, for he saved her life one night when an attempt was made to assissinate Napoleon, after the opera by tarowing band-grenades. He also helped her off to England in 1770, when every one else had deserted her. Evans' wife was at the seashore at the time, and Eugenie, in the clothes of Mrs. Dr. Evans passed out of the city as the dentist's wife. He took her to the channel and went with her to England. Dr. Evans feared that France would lose in the struggle with Germany. He knew well the constitution of the German army and he warned both Louis Napoleon and Eugenie that they would probably be de-

Carpenter in Cleveland Leader. Origin of Slanting Roofs. To find the source from which the European nations have derived the art of building in stone, we must look to the land of the Pharaohs. From Egypt the craft passed to Greece, and from the Greeks it was taken up by the Romans, to be by them disseminated through the north and west of Europe in the process of colonization. The similiarity, in regard to the constructive parts of the ancient Greek buildings to some of those tound in Egypt of older date, affords strong confirmation of the tradition that the Greeks borrowed the art from the notice, and vegetables of all kinds supplied to Egyptians. The Greeks, however, in adopting it, added a new feature, the pediment, and the reason for this addition is easy to find. Egypt is practically New Photograph Rooms. rainless. All the protection from the climate required in a palace or temple in such a country is shelter from the sun by day and from the cold by night, and for this a flat roof, supported by walls, or pillars with arcitraves, is quite sufficient; but when, as in all European countries, rain has to be taken into account, a slanting roof becomes a necessity. The Greeks, with their eye for symmetry, provided for this by forming the roof with a central ridge, at an obtuse angle, from which it sloped down equally on either side. The triangular space thus formed at the end of the building, above the architrave, was occupied by the pediment, and this part of the facade, which owed its birth to the exigencies of climate, was thenceforth regarded as so essential to the artistic completeness of the work that it was said that if a temple were to be erected in the celestial regions, where rain would not be possible, the ped- | Spreckelsville, Makee Sugar Company and other ment could not be omitted.-Popular Science Monthly.

Grant's Constitutional Reticence. Grant's constitutional reticence must be kept in mind by those who wish to appreciate his character. Because he did immodest to uncloak himself to the world, | ply to or even entirely to his most intimate friend. He could not, if he would, expose his opinions and sentiments to every one he met. He was indignant at those who sought to penetrate further than he chose to allow, and kept back something from them who got closust. He had secrets of business from one friend, of politics from another, of feeling from many; and no one knew all. I found out traits in his character in the last months of his I doubt not that he had emotions and be- San Francisco; liefs which he died without revealing to his wife or children. Scotch Stages of Inebriety. The Scotch are nothing if they are not good whisky drinkers, but it is not the adulterated stuff you get here, but the water it is make of comes over "twenty falls." The only two stages of inebriety with a regular Scotch whisky soaker of the lower order is to get first "greetin' fou" and finally "blin' fou"-anglice, "crying drunk" and "blind drunk," At the first stage he will -it down and sob by himself, probably about he death of his grandfather, and in the histostage he lies helpless in the corner. To get in these two mages for the smallest expenditure, and at the same time drink good wit sky is the ob's t of all sonkers. -New York Con, trefal As vertiser
